Sorry to hear that. I hope that you are reinstated. They should be apologizing to you for the unruly student. Not firing you for correcting an out of control delinquent.

Anderson said it himself "if the situation involved him being angry and calling a student a derogatory term, I should probably be fired." and that is exactly what happened so people shouldn't be angry the principle should be fired too both were not being professional. people should be setting examples for children but they don't. all 3 people were showing a lack of respect for each other

You did the best job you could and got fired for doing a very difficult job under circumstances that other members of the staff chose not to engage in to support you. Your performance as described was measured and commendable. I wish you well sir.
